Having to urinate frequently can be a normal occurrence every now and then, especially after drinking large amounts of liquid or coffee, or even eating certain types of food.

But what happens when
“EVERY NOW AND THEN”
BECOMES FAR TOO OFTEN?

This is called stress incontinence because it occurs after coughing, laughing, sneezing, or after physical exertion and leads to the appearance of a few drops. Little discomforts are typically caused by weakened pelvic floor muscles and generally consist of a few regular or irregular drops during the day.

THIN AND ABSORBENT

Bladder weakness, or urge incontinence, is when you feel a sudden, intense need to pass urine and you have to go to the toilet immediately.

This causes small leaks which may be ongoing. Leaks can be significant, with either occasional or more regular accidents which mostly occur during the day but sometimes happen at night.

Bladder weakness often appears when THE MUSCLES THAT CONTROL THE PHYSICAL EMPTYING OF THE BLADDER ARE OVERACTIVE.

In men, urinary loss can be brought on by medical conditions such as an enlarged prostate, diabetes and Parkinson's disease. It is also common after certain types of prostate surgery.

* This range is also available for more severe incontinence issues.

Incontinence is triggered by a hyperactive bladder resulting in an almost total loss of control over the bladder.

THIS MAY BE CAUSED BY DISEASES OR DISORDERS THAT AFFECT THE NERVES including trauma to the pelvic area or spinal cord.

It occurs when abnormal nerves send signals to the bladder at the wrong time, causing its muscles to contract without enough warning time to get to the toilet. Total incontinence can also be triggered by various medical conditions.
